Coming in the spring issue of Theology Digest

Michael Amaladoss
"Challenges of mission in the 21st century"

Rapid globalization of cultures is both a result and an ongoing cause of the continuing domination of human values by technology. Our challenge for the new millennium, says Amaladoss, is to redirect the forces of technology, economics, and politics toward a dedication to divine and truly human values throughout our global community.

John T. Pawlikowski
"Christology after the Holocaust"

Christology involves messianism, and because it does, the challenge of the Holocaust cannot be ignored. According to Pawlikowski, there are at least two christological responses to the Holocaust: 1) divine vulnerability and 2) witness. After reviewing the christological thought of a number of outstanding modern scholars, Pawlikowski concludes that both responses are necessary.
